OPPOSITION TRIUMPHS OVER COOLIDGE

DEFEAT PRESIDENT'S CHOICE FOR ATTORNEY GENERAL

Tie Vote on Confirmation of Charles B. Warren for Attorney General Results by Vice President Dawes Being Absent From Senate Tuesday.

Absence of Vice President Charles G. Dawes from his chair in the United States senate was responsible for the rejection of the nomination of Charles B. Warren, of Michigan, to be attorney general of the United States Tuesday.

The vote was 40 for confirmation and 40 for rejection, a tie vote being equivalent to rejection. Had Mr. Dawes been present he could have cast the deciding vote in favor of the president's choice to head the department of justice.

The roll call came shortly after five o'clock after a series of dramatic incidents seldom equaled in the senate chamber. It marked the end of one of the most bitter contests that has arisen between President Coolidge and a senate presumably controlled by his supporters, and the result stands out as one of the most serious setbacks the president has received since he became chief executive.

G. O. P. Ruses Fail.

Administration senators realized before the roll call was concluded that the absence of the vice president meant the difference between victory and defeat. Use was made of every parliamentary ruse to prolong the delay until such a time as the vice president could be brought into the chamber to cast the deciding vote.

Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, administration leader, changed his vote to be in a position to make a motion to reconsider the vote by which the nomination was rejected. This was the official roll call, 39 for confirmation and 41 for rejection.

Meantime, the vice president was being rushed from his hotel to the Capitol, and the regular Republicans still harbored the hope that the disaster could be averted.

Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, an implacable opponent of Mr. Warren, countered the Reed motion with a motion to lay it on the table. Dawes Too Late.

Vice President Dawes arrived at the presiding officer's desk just as the roll call started on the Walsh motion. But he came too late.

Senator Lee S. Overman, of North Carolina, the one Democrat who had voted for confirmation on the first roll call switched to the opposition and joined the Democrats and Independent Republicans in supporting the Walsh motion.

The Reed motion to consider the vote was laid on the table by a vote of 41 to 39. That ended the battle. There was nothing for General Dawes to do but witness the bout of the administration forces and the triumph of the opposition.

President Coolidge had lost his first major conflict with a senate that was supposed to be one of the supporting arms of his new administration.

COME ALONG CAMPAIGN IS WORKING

Program for Community and Agricultural Betterment in County.

The County Farm bureau in this county is one of ten in Ohio which are joining in the present "Come Along" campaign for more members and a broader service program in rural Ohio. In each of these counties the same general outline of plans is being followed as leaders in this county are using. All of them expect to follow the active solicitation with the following of a more permanent program for community and agricultural betterment in their counties.

The complete list of counties now at work are: Brown, Greene, Huron, Madison, Marion, Pickaway, Ross, Sandusky, Stark and Tuscarawas.

County Farm bureaus in other sections of the state are expecting to follow the same general plan in similar campaigns which are to be arranged later in the year.

INFANT SON DEAD.

Leo Kenneth, the infant son of Alexander and Fern Baker Hampton, died at the home of his parents, 345 East Union street, Tuesday afternoon at 1:55 o'clock. The deceased was born in this city December 29, 1924. The child had been ill five days of pneumonia.

The funeral services will be held at the home Thursday afternoon at two o'clock. Rev. E. A. Tovey will officiate. Interment in Forest cemetery.

JUDGE SORRY WHIPPING POST IS ABOLISHED.

Kenneth Glendenning, 919 North Fourth street, Columbus, who faced Judge Mahaffey Tuesday on a charge of assault, preferred by his wife, left the court room with a scolding from the judge ringing in his ears.

After sentencing Glendenning to six months in the workhouse and fining him $200, Judge Mahaffey glowered at the prisoner:

"If I had my way with you," he said "you would have welts all over your body. I'm sorry the whipping post has been abolished."

GASOLINE TAX BILL PASSED BY SENATE.

Ohio senate late Tuesday concurred with the house in passing the gasoline tax bill after amending it. The vote was 22 for and 11 against.

The bill as passed by the senate provides:

A tax of two cents a gallon on gasoline:

Reduction of license tags fees 75 per cent next January; state to get 45 per cent of the tax revenue; the county to get 25 per cent; cities to get 30 per cent.

The county's 25 per cent is to be apportioned as 15 per cent dividend equally among the 88 counties and the 10 per cent to be apportioned according to motor population.

The cities' 30 per cent is to be divided as 25 per cent to be spent as they wish and 5 per cent to be used on extensions of state roads within city limits.

LEGISLATION IS ASKED FOR BETTER ROADS

Man Who Uses Should Pay and Assessments Should be Lowered.

"Every unit of the Farm bureau is working on a sensible road building program," according to Charles E. Cromley, of Harrison township.

"Both at Washington and in Columbus, Farm Bureau representatives are striving for road legislation that will consider the needs of farmers along with other classes of citizens.

The Farm bureau has vigorously fought for legislation aimed to make the man who uses the roads pay for them.

At the preceding general assembly, the Farm bureau favored the law passing assessment on property along the line of improved highways to 15 per cent.

It is now seeking to have the assessment reduced to a maximum of 10 per cent.

In a number of instances over Ohio, the Farm bureau has been the unit which has sponsored the building of such needed strips of popular subscription or volunteer labor and donated material.

MEMBERSHIP AGREEMENT OF FARMERS

Benefits of Cooperation With Group Working on Same Problem.

Team workers in the present Farm bureau membership campaign will emphasize the far reaching effect of joining the local organization the campaign directors reports. Each farmer who signs the membership agreement is not only backing the local work of the organization in community and other rural development projects but is joining the Ohio and American Farm Bureau federations as well.

The American federation is the largest organization of farmers the world has ever seen. Organized in 1919 with representatives of 28 states at the first meeting, every state in the Union, save one, now has a functioning farm bureau organization similar to the one in this state.

During its short existence the national organization has achieved great things in the opinion of local farmers. It has been a national wide leader in cooperative marketing, in legislation, the settlement of nation wide transportation problems which affect farmers, in supporting boys' and girls' club work and in general rural community work. A number of the cooperative marketing associations under plans formulated by the farm bureau which hook them up as a part of a national group working on the same problem.

DISCIPLINER CHALLENGES AND DEFIES

Steps Taken by Secretary Mellon to Discipline Senator Couzens.

ACTION UNDERWAY

To Make Him Disgorge Ten Million Dollars Due in Income Tax.

Washington, March 10—Chairman James Couzens, Republican, Michigan of the senate committee investigating the internal revenue bureau, has challenged a move by the treasury department to reopen his 1919 income tax as an attempt to "discipline" him because he has "persisted in endeavoring to eliminate rottenness in government departments."

Resumption next Monday of its inquiry into tax settlements was determined upon Tuesday by the special senate investigating committee. Chairman Couzens said the committee's decision was made without reference to his charge in the senate that the treasury was seeking to "discipline him" by reopening his 1919 return.

Waiver Unsigned.

Senator Couzens, who said Internal Revenue Commissioner Blair has personally presented to him written notice of the treasury's intention, told the senate he had declined its request that he sign a waiver under the statute of limitations by which the period in which action may be taken expires next Friday. On the basis of the "ridiculous" calculations upon which he was informed the treasury would proceed, he said, the action would involve an additional tax assessment of between ten and eleven million dollars.

Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, in a subsequent statement after two others issued by him during the day, relating to the committee testimony, declared the "only question between the treasury and Senator Couzens with respect to his 1919 taxes is whether the proper amount of tax has been collected." The secretary announced that unless the waiver re- continued on page five

LONGHEAD TEACHERS' TENURE BILL.

Whether this legislature will enact a teachers' tenure law was put up to the house Tuesday when the senate, by a vote of 32 to 2, passed a bill sponsored by Mrs. Nettie B. Longhead of Cincinnati, making indefinite tenure of teachers mandatory in districts of 10,000 or more population, and optional in rural districts.

Three years' consecutive service in a district is necessary, however, before a teacher may be employed on indefinite tenure.

Akron, March 11—Arrested for operating a horse and buggy while intoxicated. William King, 62, farmer, proved to the court that there is no such charge provided in the law books. He will be tried for intoxication.

Spreading the Feast for the Stranger

When Sam Blythe was a Washington correspondent he went into New England to sound out public opinion on one or another of those crises which, politically speaking, are forever threatening the liberties of the American people. I forget now just what particular crisis it was, but, at any rate, for the moment it was of deep concern to the public at large and Sam's job was to get a slant on the prevalent sentiment in certain states.

Among others, he called upon the retired political leader of New Hampshire, who lived in a small but comfortable cottage in a little town. The old gentleman felt a deep concern in the vital question of the hour, whatever it was. He argued and he expounded, and he produced documents in support of his views. Noontime approached and still he was nowhere near through with what he had to say. So he insisted that Blythe should remain with him through the afternoon.

Having sampled the cuisine of the local hotel at breakfast, Blythe promptly consented. The old gentleman excused himself in order to inform his wife that there would be a guest for the midday meal and also to get some important papers bearing on the subject under discussion, which were stowed away, he said, in a room upstairs. Going out, he left the parlor door ajar.

Through the opening Blythe heard a voice, evidently one belonging to the mistress of the household.

"Samantha," the lady said, raising her tone in order that she might be heard by the cook in the kitchen, "my husband has invited a gentleman to stay for dinner. Take those two large potatoes back down cellar and bring up three small ones."

A Thing Not to Be Explained

It is narrated of two colored men that they set forth one night to borrow a hog. Not until nearly daylight did they succeed in borrowing one from the piggery of a planter. Having slaughtered the prize they decided that it should be left in the cabin of one of them until the following night, when the other would come to claim his share.

During the day the present custodian, while immersing the carcass in a barrel of brine to prevent it from spoiling, decided that he needed all the meat for himself. Accordingly he removed it to a suitable hiding place and then, returning home, awaited the arrival of his partner in the enterprise of the night before.

About eight o'clock the second negro arrived, carrying an empty sack over his arm.

"Whar's de meat, Sam?" he asked, as he entered the cabin.

"In dat barrel of brine over yonder behind de back do'. Jes' go over and hep you'self to yore sheer."

The caller rolled up his sleeves and immersed his arms in the brine.

"Tain't no meat here," he said, after a thorough search.

"I ain't s'prised one bit," said Sam. "Rats is gettin' so bad 'round yere I don't know what I'm gwine do. Dey carries off ever'thing. 'I 'spects dey was eatin' dat po'k w'en I heerd 'em nibblin' today w'ile I was layin' down tryin' to sleep."

His friend stiffened suspiciously. "How come dey could nibble a hole in de barrel, eat all de po'k an' still de brine don't run out?" he demanded.

Sam took a deep breath.

"Dat," he said, "is de mystery."

The Real Point of the Joke

Two American performers, filling vaudeville engagements in London, took lodgings together in a house on a side street back of Covent garden. Late at night, following the first day of their joint tenancy, they left the theater in company and, having had a bite and a drink at a chophouse set out afoot for the new lodgings. One of the pair undertook to show the way. The trouble was, though, that for the life of him he couldn't recall the name of the street where the house stood nor the number of the house itself. For nearly an hour they wandered through deserted byways seeking their destination. Finally they happened upon a street which wore a familiar look. And sure enough, half way down the block stood the house where they were quartered.

With glad cries of relief the tired pair hurried to it. Here a fresh difficulty arose. They had no latch keys. Coming away that afternoon neither had thought to ask their landlady for a key. However, the second man figured he could pick the lock. He worked at it vainly for another half hour while his companion fidgeted about. Finally in disgust and despair he gave it up as a bad job and the two of them went to a hotel where they spent the remainder of the night.

Now comes the point of the story: The man who could not remember the name of the street, nor the number of the house was Barton the Memory Wizard. The man who could not master the lock was Houdini the Handcuff King.

KEEPING WELL

HARVESTING THE WINTER'S CROP

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN Editor of "HEALTH"

THE highest point in the pneumonia death rate comes not in the depth of winter, as one might expect, but in March and April. Yet it is easy to understand why this should be the case.

During the coldest months everyone instinctively takes greater precautions. Warmer clothing is worn, greater care is taken to prevent chills, exposure and wet feet. Elderly persons, those whose resistance is lowered, or those suffering from coughs and colds, naturally avoid any unnecessary exposure, as far as possible.

But with the coming of warmer days, many of our midwinter precautions are relaxed. Yet our early spring days are really more dangerous than the middle of winter. A mild, clear morning is, suddenly and without warning, followed by a raw, chilly afternoon. The light coat that was warm enough when we left the house after breakfast is not enough to protect us by dinner time.

But the principal reason why the toll of deaths is greater in the spring is that we are, most of us, suffering from the effects of reduced resistance, due to infectious "colds" which we have accumulated during the winter. "Colds" are infections of all or part of the mucous membrane lining the nose and the upper part of the throat. The nose is the strainer of our breathing machine. As we draw outside air into the throat through the nose, it passes over the moist, warm lining of the nose, which warms it, moistens it and catches dust particles, germs and other foreign bodies. If the nose is free from obstruction and if the lining is normal, then the clean, warm, moist air goes down into the lungs without causing any irritation. But if the nose is "stopped up," then we breathe the cold, dry, germ-laden air directly into the lungs.

Frequent continuous infection of the nose not only increases the chances of lung infection, but it also, in time, is very apt to extend the inflammation from the nose itself to the sinuses or cavities opening into the nose. These cavities in the bones surrounding the nose are all lined with the same mucous membrane as the nose itself. The large cavities, one on each side, are called the maxillary sinuses, because they are located in the upper jawbones. The two small cavities above the nose, just behind the eyebrows, are the frontal sinuses. The cavities behind and above the nose are the sphenoidal and ethmoidal sinuses.

Infection of any of these cavities causes the production of pus or matter in these bony spaces.

The nose is the body's sentinel. Avoid colds or have them promptly treated if you have one. Keep the nose free and open during the winter and you will be in much less danger from pneumonia in the spring.

KEEPING WELL

WHAT ARE WE MADE OF?

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN Editor of "HEALTH"

WHAT is your body made of? You know in a general way but not in any way that you can grasp. When the newspaper or magazine writer wants his readers to appreciate the value of some large amount of money, he tells how many times around the earth it would go in hundred-dollar bills laid end to end, or how many times higher than the Woolworth building or the Washington monument, if piled up in the form of silver dollars. To comprehend things beyond our own knowledge, we have to have some kind of a mental yardstick.

In a recent issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association Dr. George Luten of the Mayo clinic gives some interesting facts about the human body.

The total amount of blood in the body would half fill an ordinary bucket; the fat would make seven bars of soap; the iron would be enough for a middle-sized nail. There is lime enough in the bones to whitewash a chicken-coop; phosphorus enough to make 2,200 matches. The blood contains about a teaspoonful of sugar and a tablespoonful of salt. Normal blood contains about 5,000,000,000 red corpuscles for every cubic millimeter, so that the total number of red blood cells would be about 25,000,000,000,000.

Much has been said lately about the absence of iodine in the body causing goiter. Evidently, only a small amount of this substance is necessary to preserve health since the iodine in the entire body amounts to only 1-100 of a gram, or about 1½ grains. The total amount of uric acid in the blood is from two to three grains, yet this small amount can be accurately measured from a few drops of blood. Still more delicate are the tests for some other substances. Epinephrin, a substance given off by the adrenal glands, can be detected in a solution of 1 to 350,000,000. You will get the same strength solution if you poured a small glass of whisky into the contents of 1,320 street sprinkling carts, which would form a procession about six miles long.

When we are dealing with a machine as scientific and delicate as the human body it isn't any wonder that little things will sometimes affect its workings.

Kinds of Hosiery Worn

by Dainty Paris Women

The correct length of the skirt among the best-dressed women of Paris is half way between the knee and the ankle, says the Kansas City Star. Only the very young or the very frivolous dare to have their dresses shorter. One thing common to all is fine hosiery.

Silk stockings of gossamer texture still are being worn by the large majority of "Parisiennes," though when the really cold days of winter came, a few of them were persuaded to wear the speckled woolen hose. Wool stockings were found, however, to give the legs a clumsy look and did not go well with the new kid footwear, so "madame" and "mademoiselle" looked elsewhere in search of the necessary warmth and the ever-essential chicness.

They solved this difficult problem by adopting very fine hand-made angora wool stockings, flesh colored, with equally thin "Paris nudes" over them. Although flesh-colored hose is worn the most, there is a distinct tendency toward "nudes" becoming warmer in tone; in other words, they are running, not toward white and cream, but toward beaver, beige and cinnamon.

Clocked hose—the clocks being of the very finest open work—add an additional touch of smartness to the graceful legs and beautifully shod feet of Parisian women, who aim at perfection in dress from the very soles of their feather-weight footwear upward.

There is no doubt that increased attention is being paid just now to hosiery styles, as proved by the many new and luxuriously appointed shops of "hosiery de luxe" which have been opened in the main thoroughfares of the French capital within the last few months.

Finally, golden stockings are being worn with lame shoes in the casinos and ballrooms of the Riviera.

Fullness at Front and Sides of Spring Skirts

The concentration of fullness at the front and sides of the skirt is emphasized in the spring mode. This fullness is generally developed by means of various types of plaits or plaiting.

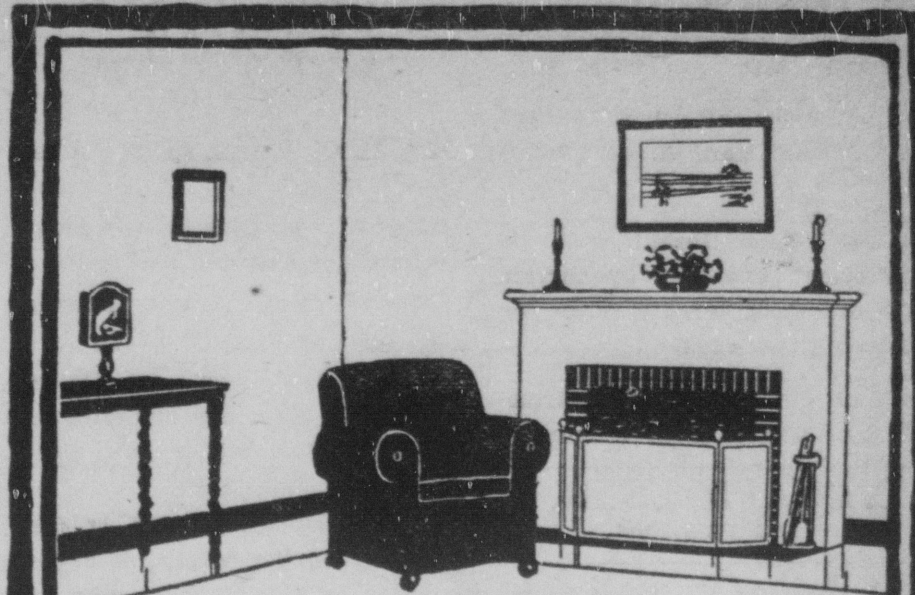

"Kick" plaits, as inverted box plaits are termed, form the favorite method of introducing width, single plaits of this type being seen frequently at one side of the front. Occasionally they are allowed to fall loose from the belt to the hem, but in the majority of instances they are held by a dart-shaped stitching to the knees.

Where gores are employed, the fullness is equally distributed, this being the only exception to the rule of the straight back. Both four and six-gore models are seen, the former generally having wide front and back gores with narrower ones at the sides. A particularly striking example of the latter has an inverted box plait of horizontally striped flannels in yellow and black, an effect which gives the impression of a split riding skirt.

Box plaits form the entire front of the skirt and side panels, side plaits and combination plaits also are seen. Novelty developments include a double box plait, and knife plaits that change to box plaits at irregular intervals. The wrap-arounds are either sewed down, or have a very wide lap with a plaited edge.

Tunic Forms Train

Tunics are now being trained to be trains. One evening frock seen in Paris consists of a pale blue and gold lame slip, over which is worn a blue faille tunic so cut as to form long points in the back, which sweep the floor. The tunic is banded with gold-lame ribbon at the short sleeves and at the neckline.

Be Ready to Put Out Fire

Having a fire extinguisher on hand may mean the saving of valuables. You can make one yourself. All you have to do is to dissolve 20 pounds of common salt and 10 pounds of chloride of ammonia in 7 gallons of water. Pour this into thin glass quart bottles, cork well and seal to prevent evaporation. When you discover a blaze throw a bottle into the flame with sufficient force to shatter it or break off the neck of the bottle and scatter the contents on the fire.

Birds Foretell Weather

Birds are said to be especially good as barometers. There is an old rhyme that says, "When the fowls roll in the sand rain is at hand," and when hens are seen trimming their feathers it is a good sign of rain. Skylarks soar high if the weather is likely to remain good, but low if wet days impend.

HAPPENINGS
IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From the Wires by Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

(United Press)

Columbus, March 11—In a case appealed from Marion the supreme court of Ohio holds that the Marion occupational tax, adopted as a means of pulling that city off the financial rocks a year ago, is fully in accord with the state and national constitutions.

Columbus, March 11—The supreme court granted a new trial to Miss Victoria Enos, suing the Cincinnati Baseball club for damages as a result of injuries received when struck by a foul ball during a Reds game at Cincinnati last summer.

St. Marys, Ohio, March 11—At the age of 11, Urban A. Jaycox, then a drummer boy in the Civil war, sat upon the knee of President Abraham Lincoln. Today he is dead at his home here from cancer.

Marion, March 11—Six thousand delegates are here for the 29th annual meeting of the Ohio Daughters of the American Revolution. Today's program called for the placing of a wreath on the tomb of former President and Mrs. Warren G. Harding.

Cleveland, March 11—Advised by her husband in Pittsburgh to start divorce proceedings, Mrs. Clara Rapaport, instead invited her friends in for a "farewell" party here and after an evening of merriment, swallowed poison.

"I did not want to be disgraced before my Pittsburgh friends by divorce proceedings, she said in the hospital today where she is recovering. She separated from her husband January 5.

Columbus, March 11—Spring thunder storms accompanied by rain were general thruout Ohio during the night. They followed the warmest March 10 in 46 years with the mercury reaching 70 and 71 degrees in many cities in the state.

Cities of Palestine
Once Important Points

In ancient Palestine and the adjacent country were two cities bearing the name Caesarea. In one case that word formed the entire name; in the other it was part only, the full name being Caesarea Philippi.

Caesarea is mentioned nine times in the Book of Acts. The city bearing this name was situated on the coast of Palestine, on the line of the great road from Tyre to Egypt, and about halfway between Joppa, the Jaffa of today, and Dora. The road skirted the coast of the Mediterranean. Caesarea lay northwest of Jerusalem and was about seventy miles distant. At one time there stood on this point of the coast merely a town called "Strato's Tower," with a landing place. The city was built by Herod the Great, king of Judea at the time of our Lord's birth and for many years before. The city was named after the Roman emperor, Claudius Caesar. It was the political capital of Palestine and the residence of the Herodian kings, and later, when Palestine was a Roman province, the residence of the procurators or governors of Judea, two of whom were Felix and Festus, before whom St. Paul appeared as a prisoner, says the Christian Guardian.

Caesarea continued to be a city of some importance even in the time of the Crusaders in the Middle ages. The name still lingers in the Turkish name given to the place, Kaisariyeh. The present population is about 70,000.

So far as the gospel record goes, Caesarea Philippi is mentioned only twice—in St. Matthew 16:18 and St. Mark 8:27, and in accounts of the same transactions.

Caesarea Philippi was at the easternmost and most important of the two recognized sources of the River Jordan and therefore, well to the north.

The city was built on a limestone terrace in a valley at the base of Mount Hermon. The place with the adjacent territory became part of the district ruled over by Philip, son of Herod the Great. Philip's title was tetrarch of Trachonitis. He enlarged and embellished the town and called it Caesarea Philippi, partly after his own name and partly after that of the Roman emperor. The modern name of the place is Banias. The Jewish historian, Josephus, calls the place Panlun.

CITIZENS
TRAINING.

Pickaway county has responded to the 1925 enrollment campaign for the annual Citizens' Military Training camp; candidates who have been definitely accepted for the training since the campaign officially got under way March 1, according to an announcement from Fifth Corps Area headquarters, Fort Hayes, Columbus, Ohio.

Most of the young men who attended the C. M. T. camp last summer, although a number were alternates who were not ordered to camp, having submitted their application after the quota was filled last year.

Jas. N. Lindsay, New Holland, is the first candidate accepted. All of the boys are assured of attending one of the two C. M. T. camps this year which will be held at Camp Knox, Kentucky, the month of July and Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana, July 8 to August 6.

The government pays all expenses connected with the month's training including transportation to the camps and return. Age limits for the beginners' course are 17 to 24 and the applicant is required to be normal physically and of good moral character.

Few Sharks Attack Humans

The bureau of fisheries says that sharks sometimes enter relatively shallow water. Danger of attack from this form is very slight. That sharks do occasionally attack human beings is admitted, but the danger is far more remote than ordinary hazards of life, such as being killed by an automobile or death from the more common forms of disease.

STERILIZATION

Of Inmates of State Prisons and Asylums To Be Asked In Bill To Be Presented In Illinois Legislature.

Chicago, March 9.—Sterilization of inmates of state prisons and asylums, at the discretion of a board of five physicians, is provided in a bill Representative John G. Gibson of Cook county, plans to introduce in the legislature. The object of the bill is to stop the spread of idioecy and feeble-mindedness, Representative Gibson and Dr. Frances Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill., who prepared the measure, declared.

"It would make it possible to sterilize and send back to their homes many of the mentally undeveloped who now are dangerous and must be kept in institutions, but who, if sterilized, would be hard-working, useful individuals in their own homes," Dr. Blanchard said.

Twelve states now have sterilization laws. California is the only state to apply this power "fearlessly" Rep. Gibson said.

The state has sterilized approximately 4,000 inmates of institutions it is estimated. In Kansas, 200 inmates have been sterilized. Other states with sterilization acts are Iowa, Nebraska, the Dakotas, Oregon, Washington, Connecticut, Wisconsin, Montana and New Jersey.

Hardware Dealer's Duty

In a political campaign the hardware dealer has his duty to perform as a citizen. He should be a leader of progressive thought in his community. He, above all, should base his judgment on fact. He should separate the facts from the chaff, and the principle from the blather. Having done so, he can then use his influence quietly for worthy candidates, for sound principles and new hopes, keeping free from passion and personal offenses. Heated arguments have never helped a merchant—neither have they ever converted anyone.—Good Hardware.

CHEVROLET OPENING

Saturday, March 14th, Circleville, Ohio.

AMUSEMENTS

We thought Rudolph Valentino had about reached the heights in screen entertainment when he chose Booth Tarkington's "Monsieur Beaucaire" as his "come-back" vehicle for Paramount after an absence of two years.

But "the sheik" has fairly outdone himself in "A Sainted Devil" his latest production which opened at the Met theater yesterday. It's a Joseph Henabery production, an adaptation by Forrest Halsey of the magazine story, "Rope's End" by Rex Beach.

"A Sainted Devil" has to do with South America and South Americans, pictorially beautiful story of old Spanish customs against modern city life. It shows the virility of the Pampas against the sophisticated culture of Buenos Aires, the Paris of the Americas.

Valentino has a role that fits him to perfection. As a dashing young South American, fired by the pure Castilian blood of generations which courses thru his veins, he makes a picture never to be forgotten.

If you are one of those who thought "Beaucaire" was just about the last word in lavish productions—gorgeous settings, superb portrayals, etc.—go see "A Sainted Devil" and be convinced that there's always something new under the sun. Here's the "great lover" in the kind of a role the public likes to see him in—first as a young planter of wealthy parents, then a regular holy-terror, brooding over the loss of his lovely wife who was abducted on their wedding day.

What a part this is; and how Valentino does play it!

Helen D'Alky, Nita Naldi, Louise Lagrange, Dagmar Godowsky, Raphael Bongini, George Siegman and others have prominent roles in the strong supporting cast, and all give exceptionally good accounts of themselves.

Wisdom Teeth

A fair percentage of persons never have wisdom teeth, declares Hygela magazine. These teeth generally erupt some time between the eighteenth and twenty-fifth year, although in many cases eruption is delayed. Frequently wisdom teeth form but remain within the jaw bone and never erupt. The majority of such teeth do no harm, although occasionally it is necessary to remove them if there is pain or some sign of infection.

Frivolous Oldsters

Two eighty-year-old men in Vienna, Austria, who were bobbing for apples at a party given for employees of a shop became engaged in a fierce fight over the game. One of the elderly men claimed that his opponent was using his beard to snare the apple in the tub. Police were called to stop the quarrel.

quested of Senator Couzens was signed before Friday, "it will probably be necessary to make an arbitrary assignment," which will serve to hold the case open.

Says Matter Closed.

Senator Couzens explained to the senate that the tax on the stock sale had been paid on the basis fixed by the treasury during the Wilson administration and the matter had been closed for three or four years.

Describing the contents of a memorandum accompanying the formal treasury notice given him, the source of which, he said, commissioner Blair had refused to disclose but which apparently had been prepared in the treasury. Senator Couzens called attention that he was the only minority stockholder in the Ford company to whom it made reference.

Secretary Mellon stated, however, that waivers already had been obtained from the other minority stockholders. The memorandum presented to the senator, Mr. Mellon said, had been received by mail last week from a "responsible person," whose identity was not disclosed.

In stating that to "protect the interests" of the government it probably will be necessary to make an arbitrary assessment, the treasury head added that before this is done "Senator Couzens, as any other taxpayer, will be given every opportunity he may desire to present the facts to the bureau."

SOCIAL CALENDAR

Walnut township W. C. T. U. met with Mrs. Lyda Brinker and Meda Hay Tuesday afternoon, February 17. A Frances Willard day program was rendered.

Mrs. Lucy B. Price of Circleville, the county president, was present and gave a most interesting report of the National Jubilee convention held at Chicago, in November.

During the five years of the jubilee campaign, there was a net gain of 2,813,000 women to the W. C. T. U. Ohio stood first with a gain of 6,753. While visiting with the Frances Willard home, she said she felt she was treading on sacred ground. This convention reported the work our crusade mothers did 50 years ago and what has been accomplished. This is children's and young people's year, so there is a great work ahead for our women for the future of our country depends upon the kind of training we give our children.

"Where are the women to lead today Who will spend an hour or two, Teaching the young, life's game to play

As only a woman can do. Villages and slums are calling come. Here are the young indeed Who can tell what they might become

If only the women would lead.

The meeting closed with a solo by Mrs. Carrie Hedges, which was greatly appreciated. Followed by prayer by Rev. Mr. Chandler. The hostess served refreshment.

Our meetings are the third Tuesday of the month and every one is welcome to our meetings. Hope every member will come and bring a friend along.

Mrs. Frank Gregory of Musselshell Montana, entertained the Bridge club of which she was a former member Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Fickardt.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark Will will be the host and hostess to the dinner club this evening.

Valuable Eastern Woods

"Ironwood" is the name given to various trees with hard, heavy wood. Metrosideros vera, a native of Java and other eastern islands, is much valued by the Chinese and Japanese for making rudders, etc., and is exported in small quantities. The bark is used in Japan as a medicine. Mesua ferrea, a native of the East, is planted for its heavy, hard wood and for its fragrant and rose-like flowers.

Little Dwarf Trees

The Department of Agriculture says that the variety of dwarf and standard sized trees has not yet been thoroughly tested. Some dwarf fruit trees may be shorter lived than the standard-sized tree.

NEWS ABOUT COURT HOUSE

Homer S. Reber has been appointed administrator of the estate of his sister, Miss Emma Alice. The estate is estimated to be worth $26,000, of which $600 is personal. The court appointed J. H. Sark, C. E. Weaver and A. E. Courtright appraisers.

W. H. Ditrich was appointed administrator of the estate of Mary Ann Johnson. The estate is estimated to be worth $11,000, of which $3000 is personal. The court appointed C. M. Beatty, William Beavers and Joseph Hill appraisers.

Good-Luck Stones

The various precious and semi-precious stones have been endowed with certain talismanic properties. Sapphires are supposed to bring peace of mind, but they must be worn only by those of pure and holy life. The Chinese bury small bags of red stones under their houses to distract the attention of evil spirits. The lodestone is the actor's gem, for it fixes the attention of an audience. It is also considered a good stone for lovers to carry. Opals were once highly valued for the cure of eye diseases.

STEPS ARE TAKEN TO CLEAN UP DANCE HALLS

Youngstown, March 9.—Steps to clean up dance halls in this city were taken at a conference between representatives of women's clubs and Chief of Police Kedgewin Powell today. An ordinance providing for members of women's clubs to act as hostesses and chaperones of public dances will be presented to city council tomorrow night and warnings will be issued to managers and proprietors of hotels and restaurants permitting dancing that there has been too much "hip-pocket" liquor consumed in their places, Chief Powell said.

"Young girls are being ruined by having liquor dispensed too freely from flasks at dances, both private and public," Chief Powell declared.

The ordinance will contain a clause forbidding persons under 18 to attend a public dance after 9 o'clock unless accompanied by a guardian or relatives. It also will prohibit noisy jazz music and dancers will not be permitted to hold their partners tightly.

Many Kinds of Trees

In North America there are almost a thousand native kinds, besides a large number of foreign trees that have been widely introduced, says the American Nature association in "Tree Habits." Of our native trees, however, only about one hundred can be classified as important timber trees.

Snow Crystals

Snow crystals vary in size from minute ones which can scarcely be seen with the naked eye to plates a quarter of an inch in diameter. When the air is full of large crystals, frequent collisions take place, and numbers of crystals interlock and fall to the ground as "snow."

Real "Cure" for Cold

A New York newspaper recently compiled a list of prescriptions for an ordinary cold. The readers sent in more than 3,000. And not one was like another. Perhaps the best prescription of all was given by a famous surgeon. He said: "Stay in bed and forget it."

Such popularity must be deserved

IN one great success after another, George M. Cohan has won nation-wide distinction as actor, playwright and producer. None may challenge his record for clean hits.

Such success must be deserved.

To be chosen by millions, even a cigarette must have "made good."

Chesterfield's record gains, for example, are no accident, but rather the result of sheer merit—greater fragrance and a more pleasing taste.

STEVENSON'S

Disillusioned When He Found a Faded Model

By MILDRED GOODRIDGE

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

"MARY looks old and worn," said John Strickland to his brother Ephraim.

"Should think she would!" retorted Eph. "Say, John, this has been an imposition—our family landing down on you this way."

"Well, you're welcome, aren't you?" demanded John.

"Your wife has surely made it so—dear woman! She's a prize, a jewel, but to harbor and work out her life for her husband's folks—no more of that! We're going home tomorrow."

And that afternoon something cross-grained hit John—hard. He had just been noticing the tired but smiling face of his wife, when an automobile sped by. It contained a chauffeur and two others. The others were Mr. and Mrs. Allison.

They were old residents of the town, but had left five years previous to live in the city. Now they were coming back to the old Booth homestead.

John stared. He had not seen Mrs. Allison for over five years. She had been his first flame.

"Why, she looks as young—yes, younger than when I last saw her!" he was forced to ejaculate.

Certainly, at a distance, Mrs. Allison was a vivid contrast to Mary Strickland.

"I might have had her once, if I'd set out strong enough to win her," mused John. He was not tired of sweet, loyal Mary; he would not "trade" with Cy Allison if a basket full of diamonds was thrown into the bargain! Still, John was in just that mood where the dull ends of home life looked more somber than usual. On the other hand, the sight of the bejeweled, brilliant-looking woman who had once held his affections quite dazzled him. John wandered down the street aimlessly, dreaming.

"Oh, say, Mr. Strickland!" sang out a sudden voice.

"Why, it's Nat, isn't it?" inquired John, always kindly and cordial in his greetings, and especially so with children.

It was a child, a little fellow of about ten, a cripple, wheeling himself across the walk towards John in his invalid chair, who accosted him.

"See here," said little Nat. "I found this just now."

He extended a silver-netted purse, and John stared at it and awaited an explanation.

"Where did you get it, Nat?" he inquired.

"In the road. It was right after an auto went by."

"Whose?"

"The Allison's."

"Oh, indeed," murmured John, and took the silver purse, placed it in his pocket and started down the street.

John reached the rather imposing home of the Allison's. He started and stared through an open window. A decidedly waspish voice had called out sharply:

"Cy!"

It was Mrs. Allison calling to her husband. She was plainly visible to John in the room beyond the window. John Strickland stepped back quickly. He could not help but note Mrs. Allison standing before a mirror. He was startled, almost shocked. She removed the upper set of teeth that had so reminded John of pearls. Then she removed some of her hair. The amazed John thought of scarce-crows. He was embarrassed; he was amazed. Cy came into the room.

"What d'ye want?" he inquired crossly.

"That money I let you have. You didn't use only a small part of it."

"I'd like to carry a little once in a while," growled Cy.

"Oh, yes, to distribute among those worthless relatives of yours!" sneered the model Myra. "I'll give them their walking papers if any of that cheap rabble show their faces about here. All you've got is what I've brought you. My money, do you understand? Hand over the change of that ten-dollar bill."

Cy Allison groaned and complied. Down the steps and homeward bound bolted John Strickland—disillusioned.

"What I've escaped!" he exclaimed.

"And I fancy Mary faded! Oh, I've been a wicked man! And see how that dear woman has treated my relatives!"

"John," spoke Mary, as he entered the house, "your brother and his family are thinking of leaving us."

"Yes, Eph spoke of it today," answered John.

"Don't let them. His wife is resting splendidly and another week will just put her on her feet."

"Oh, you dear, loving, unselfish woman!" cried John, and actually picked up Mary in his arms and kissed her a dozen times.

And Mary blushed till her comely face looked just as girlish as of yore, and with a smile of rare content John went out of the house, whistling a happy tune.

"I'd be ashamed to tell her of my comparing her with that woman," mused John softly to himself. "Why, Mary is a pretty picture compared to that made-up scarecrow. I'm going to love her more than ever, and I'll never think she looks old and faded again!"

Ancient Bards
"Scalds" was the name given to the ancient Scandinavian poets, who sang or recited verses of their own composition, commemorating the famous deeds of living heroes or of their ancestors. They were similar to the troubadours of southern France, the minnesingers of Germany and the bards of the Celtic tribes. Very few complete Scaldic poems are extant; but many fragments are found in the "Younger Edda" and in the "Sagas."—Kansas City Star.

Forcing Vegetables by Use of Hotbeds
Frame Should Be Six Feet Wide and Any Length.

For forcing early vegetables such as tomatoes, eggplants, peppers, etc., the hotbed is indispensable. To construct a hotbed, an eastern or southern exposure should be selected. The frame should be six feet wide and any desired length. The hotbed sashes are always three feet wide and six feet long. As a rule for the family garden, a hotbed six by six feet will be sufficient. It would be much better, however, to have a frame six by twelve feet. This will afford ample space for transplanting the plants and give them more room to develop properly, says A. E. Schilleter, extension horticulturist at Clemson college.

The soil is excavated to a depth of eighteen inches and the frame built six feet wide and desired length and fitted over the trench. The frame should slope toward the east in order to admit sunlight.

The bottom of the frame is filled with fermenting stable manure. This should be mixed thoroughly before being placed in the frame, and packed firmly and watered freely immediately afterwards. In the South twelve inches of manure will furnish sufficient heat for hotbeds. On top of manure is placed six inches of garden soil, which has been well sifted and is free from all roots and trash. This should be slightly packed in order to make it perfectly level. It is well to cover this with one inch of finely sifted woods-earth, since this is always free from grass and weed seeds, which are frequently very troublesome when the garden soil is used.

After the bed has been completed the sashes are put in place and the frame allowed to stand for three or four days before planting the seed. This is done in order to permit the bed to become thoroughly warm before planting.

Odd African Tree
One of the strangest trees in existence is the ambash, growing in the shallow waters of Lake Chad, in Africa, a body of water which, when at its maximum extent, covers 10,000 square miles, and yet has, on the average, a depth of only six feet. The ambash tree grows so rapidly as to attain its full size, 25 feet high, with a trunk of a foot in diameter, in two years. The wood when dried is unrivaled in lightness, its density being only two-fifths that of cork.

Cultivation in Gardens to Keep the Weeds Down

A large part of the labor in gardening is involved in the cultivation to keep down weeds, weeding, thinning, etc. Weeds are objectionable in a vegetable garden because they crowd upon the vegetables, require close cultivation to get rid of them, which may be actually harmful to tender vegetables, and if the gardener lags in enthusiasm the weeds finally triumph and by fall the garden plot is a jungle of tall weeds. The gardener can do a great deal to bring his garden to the weedless condition, where labor and cultivation are reduced to a minimum. The first step is to cultivate closely in the early part of the season, when most of the weed seed germinate. The little weeds are easily killed. But weeds keep on coming up all through the season, and these must be carefully removed also, for a single weed may produce enough seed to infest the whole garden next season. So it is important that no weeds become large enough to produce and ripen seed. If this is done year after year, the number of weeds and grasses will decrease rapidly. The use of stable manure is a source of fresh infection, as this usually contains many weed seeds. This danger may be avoided by using only well rotted manure on the garden, keeping fresh manure in a compost heap for at least six months. The seeds will be sprouted or killed by the heating of the manure. Some of the plant food is lost by composting, but it is made up by the better physical condition of the manure.

Sweet Clover for Hay
Sweet clover sown in the spring will give a good hay crop by the middle of September if a good stand is obtained and the soil is in good fertility. The yellow variety is usually considered the best for hay. It is still a question whether it is best to sow oats with sweet clover and the season is the prime factor in the matter. If the season is extremely dry the oats may do more harm than good. If oats are sown only about two-thirds of the usual amount should be used.

FARM FACTS

Exercise is important in maintaining brood sows in good condition. Strong, healthy sows insure strong healthy litters at farrowing time.

Abundant light and ventilation are essential for cattle comfort and high milk production. Plan now to remodel stables and provide these essentials.

Horses need air and action. They will keep healthier if they are exercised every day by driving or by being allowed to run in the yard or pasture.

Do not neglect the ice harvest but take advantage of the cold weather and put up a supply of the frozen necessity. Plenty of ice next summer will keep the milk sweet until it reaches the market.

Poultrymen attempting to better the quality of stock by careful selection and breeding should pay some attention to the selection of breeders. Careful study of birds and their records before selection of breeding stock will be rewarded by the better chicks next spring.

It's the Chicks You Raise That Pay You a Profit

Chicks that die mean lost profits whether they die in the shell or after they are hatched. That's why the first step toward bigger poultry profits lies in choosing the right incubators and brooders.

The most successful poultry raisers, as well as most county agents, and agricultural colleges recommend Buckeye Incubators and Brooders as the real money makers.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Virtue of Imagination

There is something romantic in the plans for using an army airplane to race the moon's shadow during the eclipse of the sun, January 24. A high-powered plane, with a photographer aboard, will cross New York state in an effort to lengthen for but a brief time the opportunity given stationary cameramen. Just a minute, or even a half minute more means additional photographs. And more photographs means greater opportunity for scientists to study the most spectacular phenomena of this earth. It is a vivid bit of imagination, but it is only through imagination that men conquer, and, conquering, acquire more imagination.—Exchange.

APPROPRIATION BILL IS UP FOR CONSIDERATION.

Columbus, March 10.—(U. P.)—The House of Representatives today began the long and tedious business of passing the $75,000,000 general appropriations bill—the most important measure of the legislative session.

The bill is to be considered by the house as a "committee of the whole" before being voted on.

In actual figures the bill appropriates $76,525,288.15. Of this sum however, $1,536,515.06 was appropriated two years ago for specific purposes and since it was not spent must be re-appropriated for the same purposes.

Proponents of the Bible bill, calling for the compulsory reading of the Bible daily in the public schools and requiring all pupils above the fourth grade to memorize the ten commandments, have introduced a resolution in the senate making the same requirements of State Senators, Senate employees and newspapermen. The resolution would become effective ten days after its adoption.

The House last night passed two bills of general interest. One by Representative Mines, of Tuscarawas county, would amend the law relating to kennel licenses and dog tags. Owners of kennels in paying the usual $10 fee would receive five tags. Under the present law only one tag is received for the entire kennel.

The other measure approved by the house was by Representative Cooley, of Cuyahoga county, providing that all action against transportation companies for damages and the like must be begun within three years from the date of the cause for such action.

Famous London Spot

Cripplegate, London, England, was so called from the lame beggars who sat there as early as the year 1010. The gate was rebuilt by the brewers of London in 1244; and was pulled down and the material sold for £91 in July, 1700. On November 12, 1874, the poet John Milton was buried in the church then standing near Cripplegate.

COMPULSORY BIBLE READING IN SCHOOLS

Now Up Before Legislature is Opposed by Archdeacon Joseph H. Dodshon.

Columbus, Ohio, March 20.—For twenty years I have been advocating the reading of selected portions of the Bible in the public schools, mainly for the sake of the millions of children who never go to any church or Sunday school. However, I am opposed to the bill that is now under consideration by the state legislature for the reason that it forces Bible reading upon children whose parents do not desire it.

Now let me offer a suggestion which may help solve this question of religious liberty, which seems to be the base of most of the objections and rightly so, I think. For a number of years I was a schoolmaster in England, before taking orders in the church, and we always had religious exercises for thirty minutes every morning, and mind you, this was in a government school and not a church school. However, there was upon the wall of every school building, printed and framed, the following statement, as passed by parliament, "Parents who object to their children receiving the religious instruction may have them taught the usual subjects in a separate room during that period." Of course, I do not remember the exact wording, but the above is the gist of it and shows how carefully the British government protected the rights of a minority who did not desire Bible reading or religious instruction for their children.

Now if the Ohio legislature will include some such statement in the proposed law, a great many of the objections would be removed.

I do not believe in people being forced to read the Bible or hear it read, if they do not wish it; and they have every right to protest and become conscientious objectors. When religion is forced on people, or church going is made compulsory, then I for one will cease to be a minister of the Gospel of Love, and I maintain that the Bible Reading bill, at present before the House, is the beginning of religion by law instead of love.

JOSEPH H. DODSHON,
Archdeacon of Southern Ohio.
—Columbus Dispatch.
